The Columbia Encyclopedia

theory and practice of conducting large public and private dealings in money. Important institutions of private finance include those that deal with insurance, banking, stocks (see stock), bonds, and other securities. With the development of the national state, public finance—the management of the revenues, expenditures, and debts of the state—has been of great political, as well as economic, importance. The most important source of government revenue is taxes, but sale of public properties and franchises, as well as the sale of interest-bearing bonds, also contribute. Since the Korean War, a large part of governmental expenditures has gone for various military and defense needs. Other important areas of governmental expenditure are health, education, and welfare (the Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid programs); interest on the national debt; and public works. Important institutions of international finance are the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the International Monetary Fund.

Finance (2000)

from QFinance: The Ultimate Resource

WHY READ IT?

- Works through all the main topics of corporate finance, as well as ranging into other topics, giving the book a broader scope than usual for such textbooks.
- Focuses on practical financial decision-making and applied finance.
- Aimed at MBA and undergraduate students and business professionals, using an integrated approach to teach the basics of finance.

GETTING STARTED

Two leading finance academics provide an overarching and focused approach to the teaching of finance that will be of use to students on different levels, and teachers needing a practical guide that covers all the specifics of the subject.

Finance encompasses all the main sub-fields of finance—corporate finance, investments, financial institutions and markets—within a single unifying conceptual framework, to provide a book that works as a self-study guide or a textbook that instructs on all the main concepts of finance.

AUTHORS

Zvi Bodie (b. 1943) is professor of finance and economics at Boston University School of Management. He has served on the finance faculties at Harvard Business School and Sloan School of Management, and is a member of the Pension Research Council at the Wharton School.
