HARLEM RENAISSANCE Go to Topic Page

The Harlem Renaissance, also called New Negro movement, refers to the period of outstanding literary and artistic creativity among African Americans between the 1920s and the mid-1930s. It was centered in the vast black residential area of Harlem, New York City, where emerging African American writers produced works imbued with a newfound racial pride. Writers associated with the Harlem Renaissance defied both literary conventions set by white authors and the two earlier African American literary types—the writing of the plantation
